Strategic Approach

Sonic Branding
is the approach
of using unique,
proprietary sound
and music to convey a brand's essence and values.

Xbox use a mnemonic across platforms to strengthen their sonic branding

When you turn on your Xbox

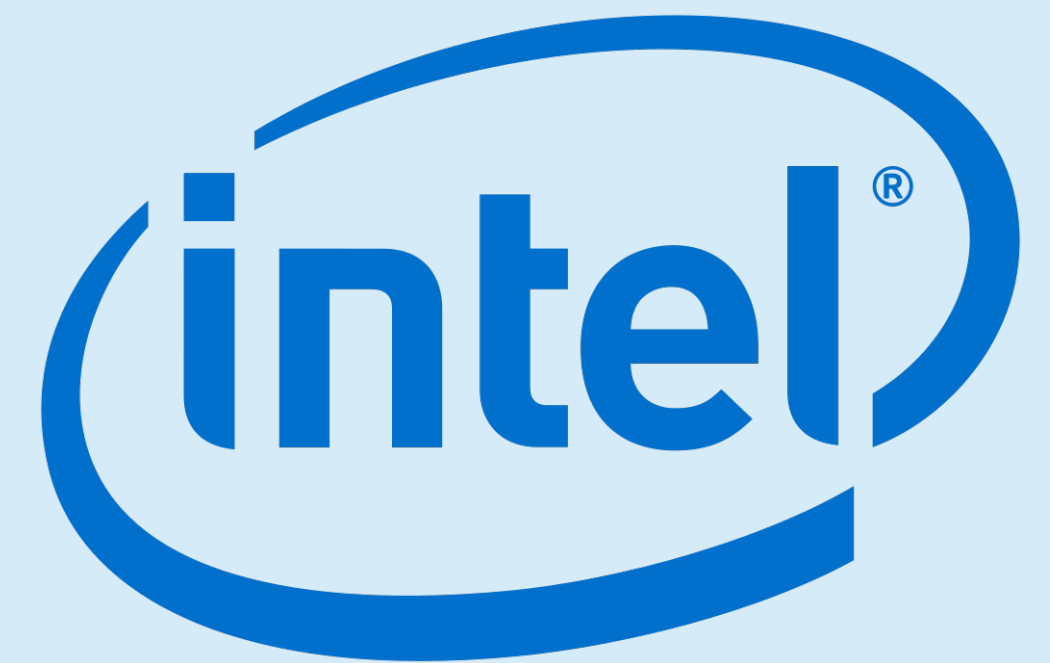

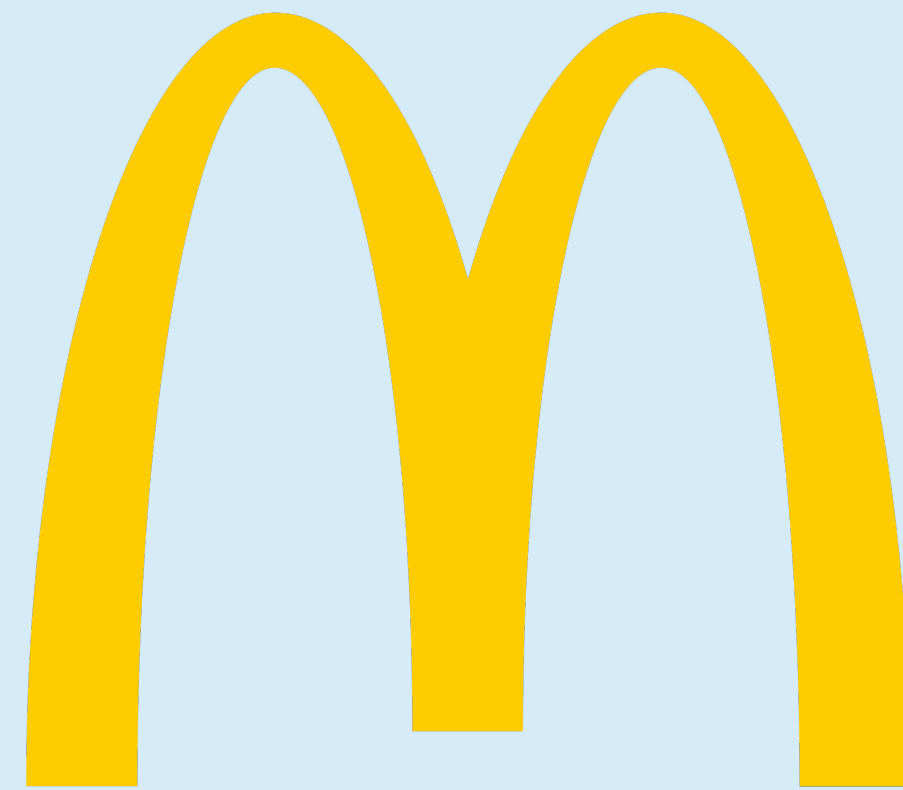

At the end of Xbox TV ads

At the end of Xbox radio ads

Many other big brands are doing it well

Coca-Cola

Five-note melody integrated into pop songs featuring credible artists

McDonalds

Sonic logo started life as the musical output of an artist partnership

Intel

Created an auditory signature to bring sensory awareness to unseen product

Sonic branding helps to...

Instantly confirm the identity of the brand

Improve brand recall

Trigger existing emotional connection to the brand

Key considerations when developing sonic branding

Do

- Create something ownable
- Tie audio to core messaging
- Consider all usage permutations across the entire enterprise
- Understand the consumer experience / emotional connection
- Think long-term
- Be consistent

Don't

- Create multiple opposing sonic IDs
- Attempt to emulate an existing brand's sonic branding
- Pastiche an established tune / song
- Force fit audio where none exists
- Expect iconic status overnight
- Be afraid to tweak elements over time to stay relevant

Variety of touchpoints to use sonic branding

Marketing

- TV / radio ads
- Customer Service

Functionality

- On website, in app
- Voice interfaces

Corporate

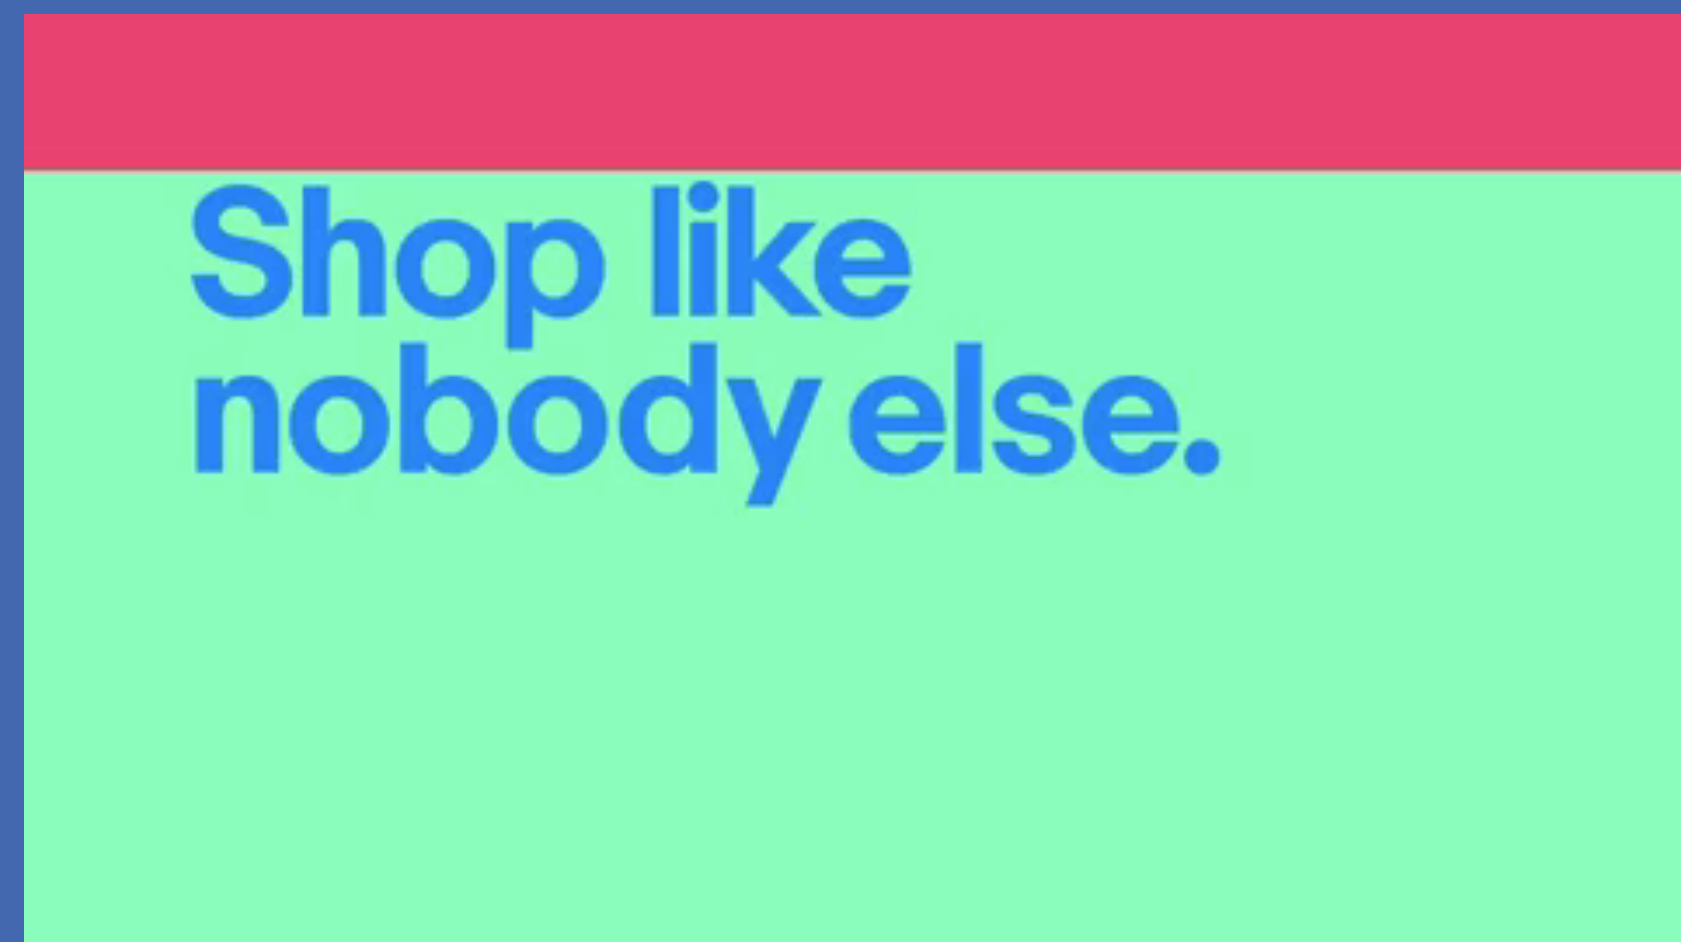

- Trade marketing
- B2B comms
- Internal comms

To be more effective we need to be...

Instantly recognisable and consistent in branding

Simple and single minded in messaging

Relatable, memorable and inspiring in our scripts

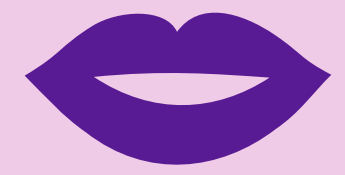

So we laid down some ground rules

We recommend using a consistent voice artist in all spots, that becomes synonymous as the ‘eBay voice’ on radio (and beyond) in each market.

As such, the voice in each market should have a personality that embodies the brand’s optimism, vibrancy, straightforwardness, wit and conversational manner.

A single voice leaves little room for inconsistencies across markets.

the voice of eBay

UK

We have identified 4 voices that fit our brief of optimistic, clever, straightforward and conversational. By using well-known people, we can successfully appeal to a wider audience from millennials to 40+. These people are great examples of voices that come across like you're not being sold to, but chatted to by a witty, upbeat friend.

Josh Widdicombe

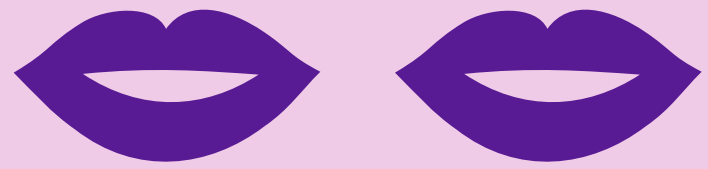

Kerry Godliman

Alexa Chung

Richard
Ayoade

Optimistic, conversational, clever and straightforward in any language. We will find the same qualities and distinguished voices in each market, to build a
Europe-wide eBay audio brand.

DE

Luke Mockridge

IT

Edoardo Leo

Geppi Cucciari

FR

Tom Villa

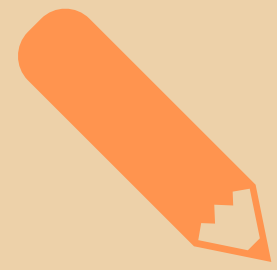

Audrey Lamy

Tone

The tone of voice of the campaign should be consistent with our wider brand tone of: Spirited, Dependable, Real, Smart.

We will deliver all messaging very clearly, in a friendly and straightforward manner, that is also witty and clever, to engage our audience.

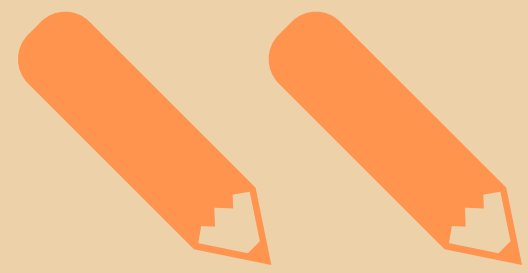

Narrative

The narrative style and structure of our radio comms should be consistent across the campaign.

We're not here to create intrigue.

We need to establish that this is an eBay commercial as soon as possible in the spot.

Music, voiced call-outs of the eBay name, and owned sound cues can all be used to communicate our brand in the first few seconds.

Each commercial will have a consistent script structure to deliver all key messaging, TOV and branding throughout the spot, that is simple to replicate in different languages.

And can accommodate multiple offers and messaging.

Music

We should always seek to use music consistently across our audio and visual comms.

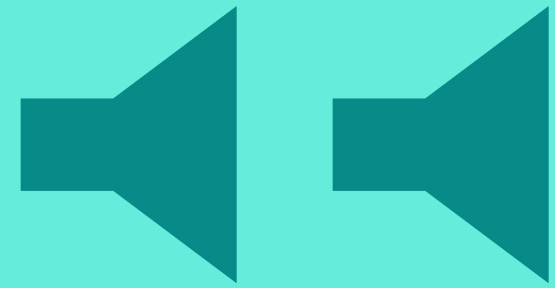

While we are using the ‘Montage’ track in our TV campaign, we should also use the track in our radio comms.

Sound

Any consistent sound cues – or mnemonic devices – that products can use throughout their user touch points are powerful branding tools.

We should, therefore, seek to employ any owned sonic device across all our audio and visual comms.

We looked at the sonic assets that currently exist in the eBay world. An asset that is associated with or can trigger the unique eBay feeling:

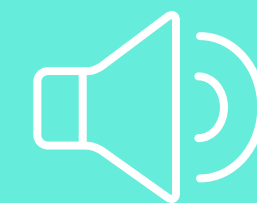

The rush of excitement from getting a great deal... The buzz of getting just the right item... The 'fist-bump' feeling of winning a bid... The satisfaction of getting paid... The anticipation of receiving an item etc.

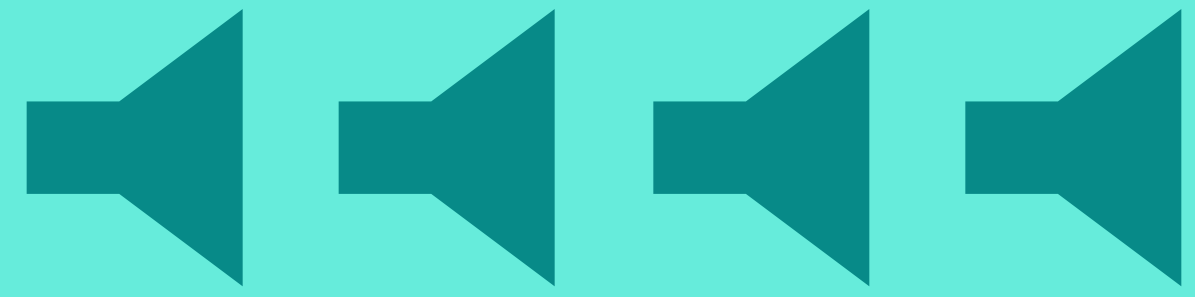

That asset is the notification sound

There's a sound every user knows and holds dearly. It's the sound that let's them know they have won the item of their dreams, made big bucks, or that special thing is on its way.

It's the eBay notification sound, it's an intrinsic part of our sonic identity. The perfect opener and closer to every one of our radio adverts.

eBay seller notification sound is my kink

3:59 PM - Jan 26, 2018

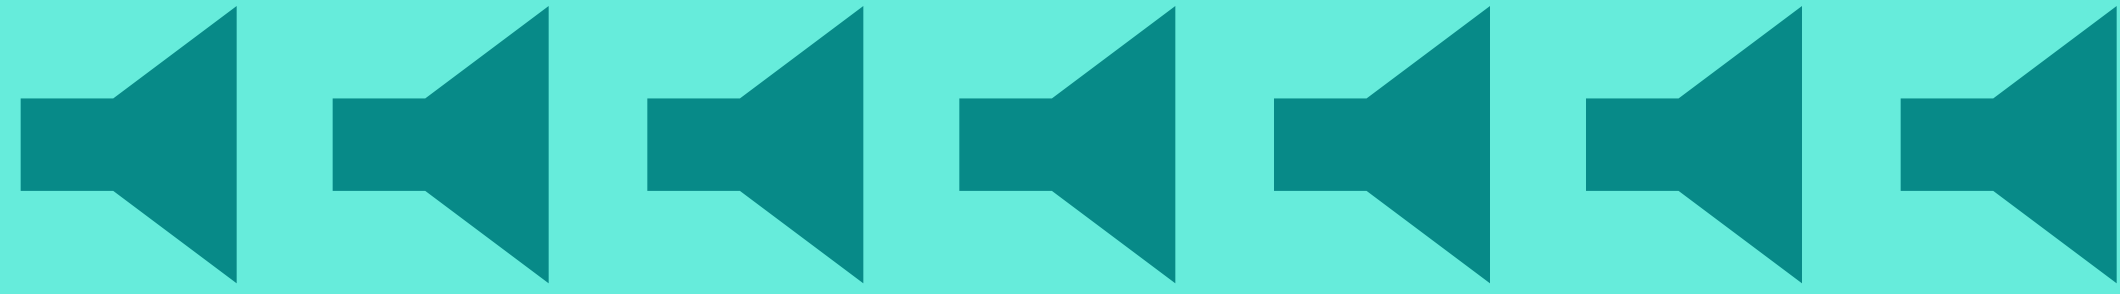

Why it works

It's instantly recognisable and eBay to the core – taken from an existing asset, not re-imagined.

The trill effect evokes colour. When we hear the sound, a rainbow spectrum of colour is painted in our mind's eye.

Amazon don't have a notification sound, so this is something we can own.

What it represents is universal – triggering the same feeling the world over.

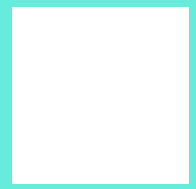

As we are talking to customers who have used eBay in the past, they will recognise the sound and give them that winning feeling, but if not, they certainly will recognise it after hearing the radio ad when they start using eBay again.

All 3 concepts are designed to a system

Campaign	Super weekends Spring	Black Friday/Cyber Monday November	Xmas November/December	Post Summer clear out September	Pre-payday pinch Every month for a week, 17 days after payday
Markets	DE, IT, FR	UK, DE, IT, FR	UK, IT	UK, DE	UK
Target	Buyers	Buyers	Buyers	Sellers	Sellers
Message	Sale is now on eBay has a wide selection of new items, on sale, with fast & free shipping	A better way to shop - avoid the headache of dealhunting eBay has great deals on brand new items, from big brands you love	Shop unique gifts conveniently eBay is full of special items you can't find on the high street and they deliver	Declutter your house now eBay is the best place to sell with easy listing and secure payments	Get some extra cash while waiting for payday On eBay you get the best price, it's quick and easy
Products	Cross-vertical spanning across Home & Garden, Fashion and Tech	Primarily tech Deals are often not confirmed until the last minute	Brand message over products	Items that no longer fuel passion or fit lifestyle	Items that no longer fuel passion or fit lifestyle
Mandatories	‘Fill Your Cart with Colour’ ‘Super Weekend’ ‘Fast and free shipping’ ‘The promotion will last until May 10th and quantities are subject to availability’ eBay Plus for Germany CTA to go to site and get deal	‘Fill Your Cart with Colour’ Advise on using ‘Did you check eBay?’ CTA to go to site and find Black Friday/Cyber Monday deals	‘Fill Your Cart with Colour’ Challenge people to shop differently: instead of fighting their way through shops to buy everyone the same gifts year after year, on eBay they can find something special and have it delivered right to their door. CTA to explore gifts	‘Fill Your Cart with Colour’ Stay away from ‘getting rid of old junk’, these are all pre-loved items. Advise on using ‘Snap It. List It. Why fill your car with colour?

Concept 1

System

The simplest, most consistent way to follow our TV comms, is to replicate it aurally.

Each TV spot begins with a question about the boring retail status quo. Then quickly introduces the colourful eBay world as the modern, vibrant antidote, with a fun product story, leading to a consistent CTA to Fill Your Cart With Colour.

So, in the same way, each radio spot starts by posing a question. Then quickly bring in our eBay Trrrinnnggg! mnemonic to sonically herald in our colourful eBay world. The TV music will also feature throughout. And we will call out the eBay brand in the first few seconds of each spot.

Each commercial will be written within the following framework to maximise brand consistency across the campaign, regardless of the individual messaging or the market it appears in.

System

How do we create different interest in each spot, without it being a production nightmare when we re-record for different markets? We use sound effects, that only need to be created once at the master recording stage.

Everyone's cart is coloured differently. We will celebrate this with a sound effect campaign.

Each spot starts with our eBay Trrrinnnggg! mnemonic to sonically establish the brand. Quickly followed by a voiceover line asking 'what's in your eBay cart?' We will then hear an engaging sound effect, whilst our narrator offers three explanations of the sound - two of them genuine eBay items, and one ridiculous.

As we reach the CTA, our eBay music kicks in, as our narrator delivers the line: Fill Your Cart With Colour Each commercial will be written within the following framework to maximise brand consistency across the campaign, regardless of the individual messaging or the market it appears in.

System

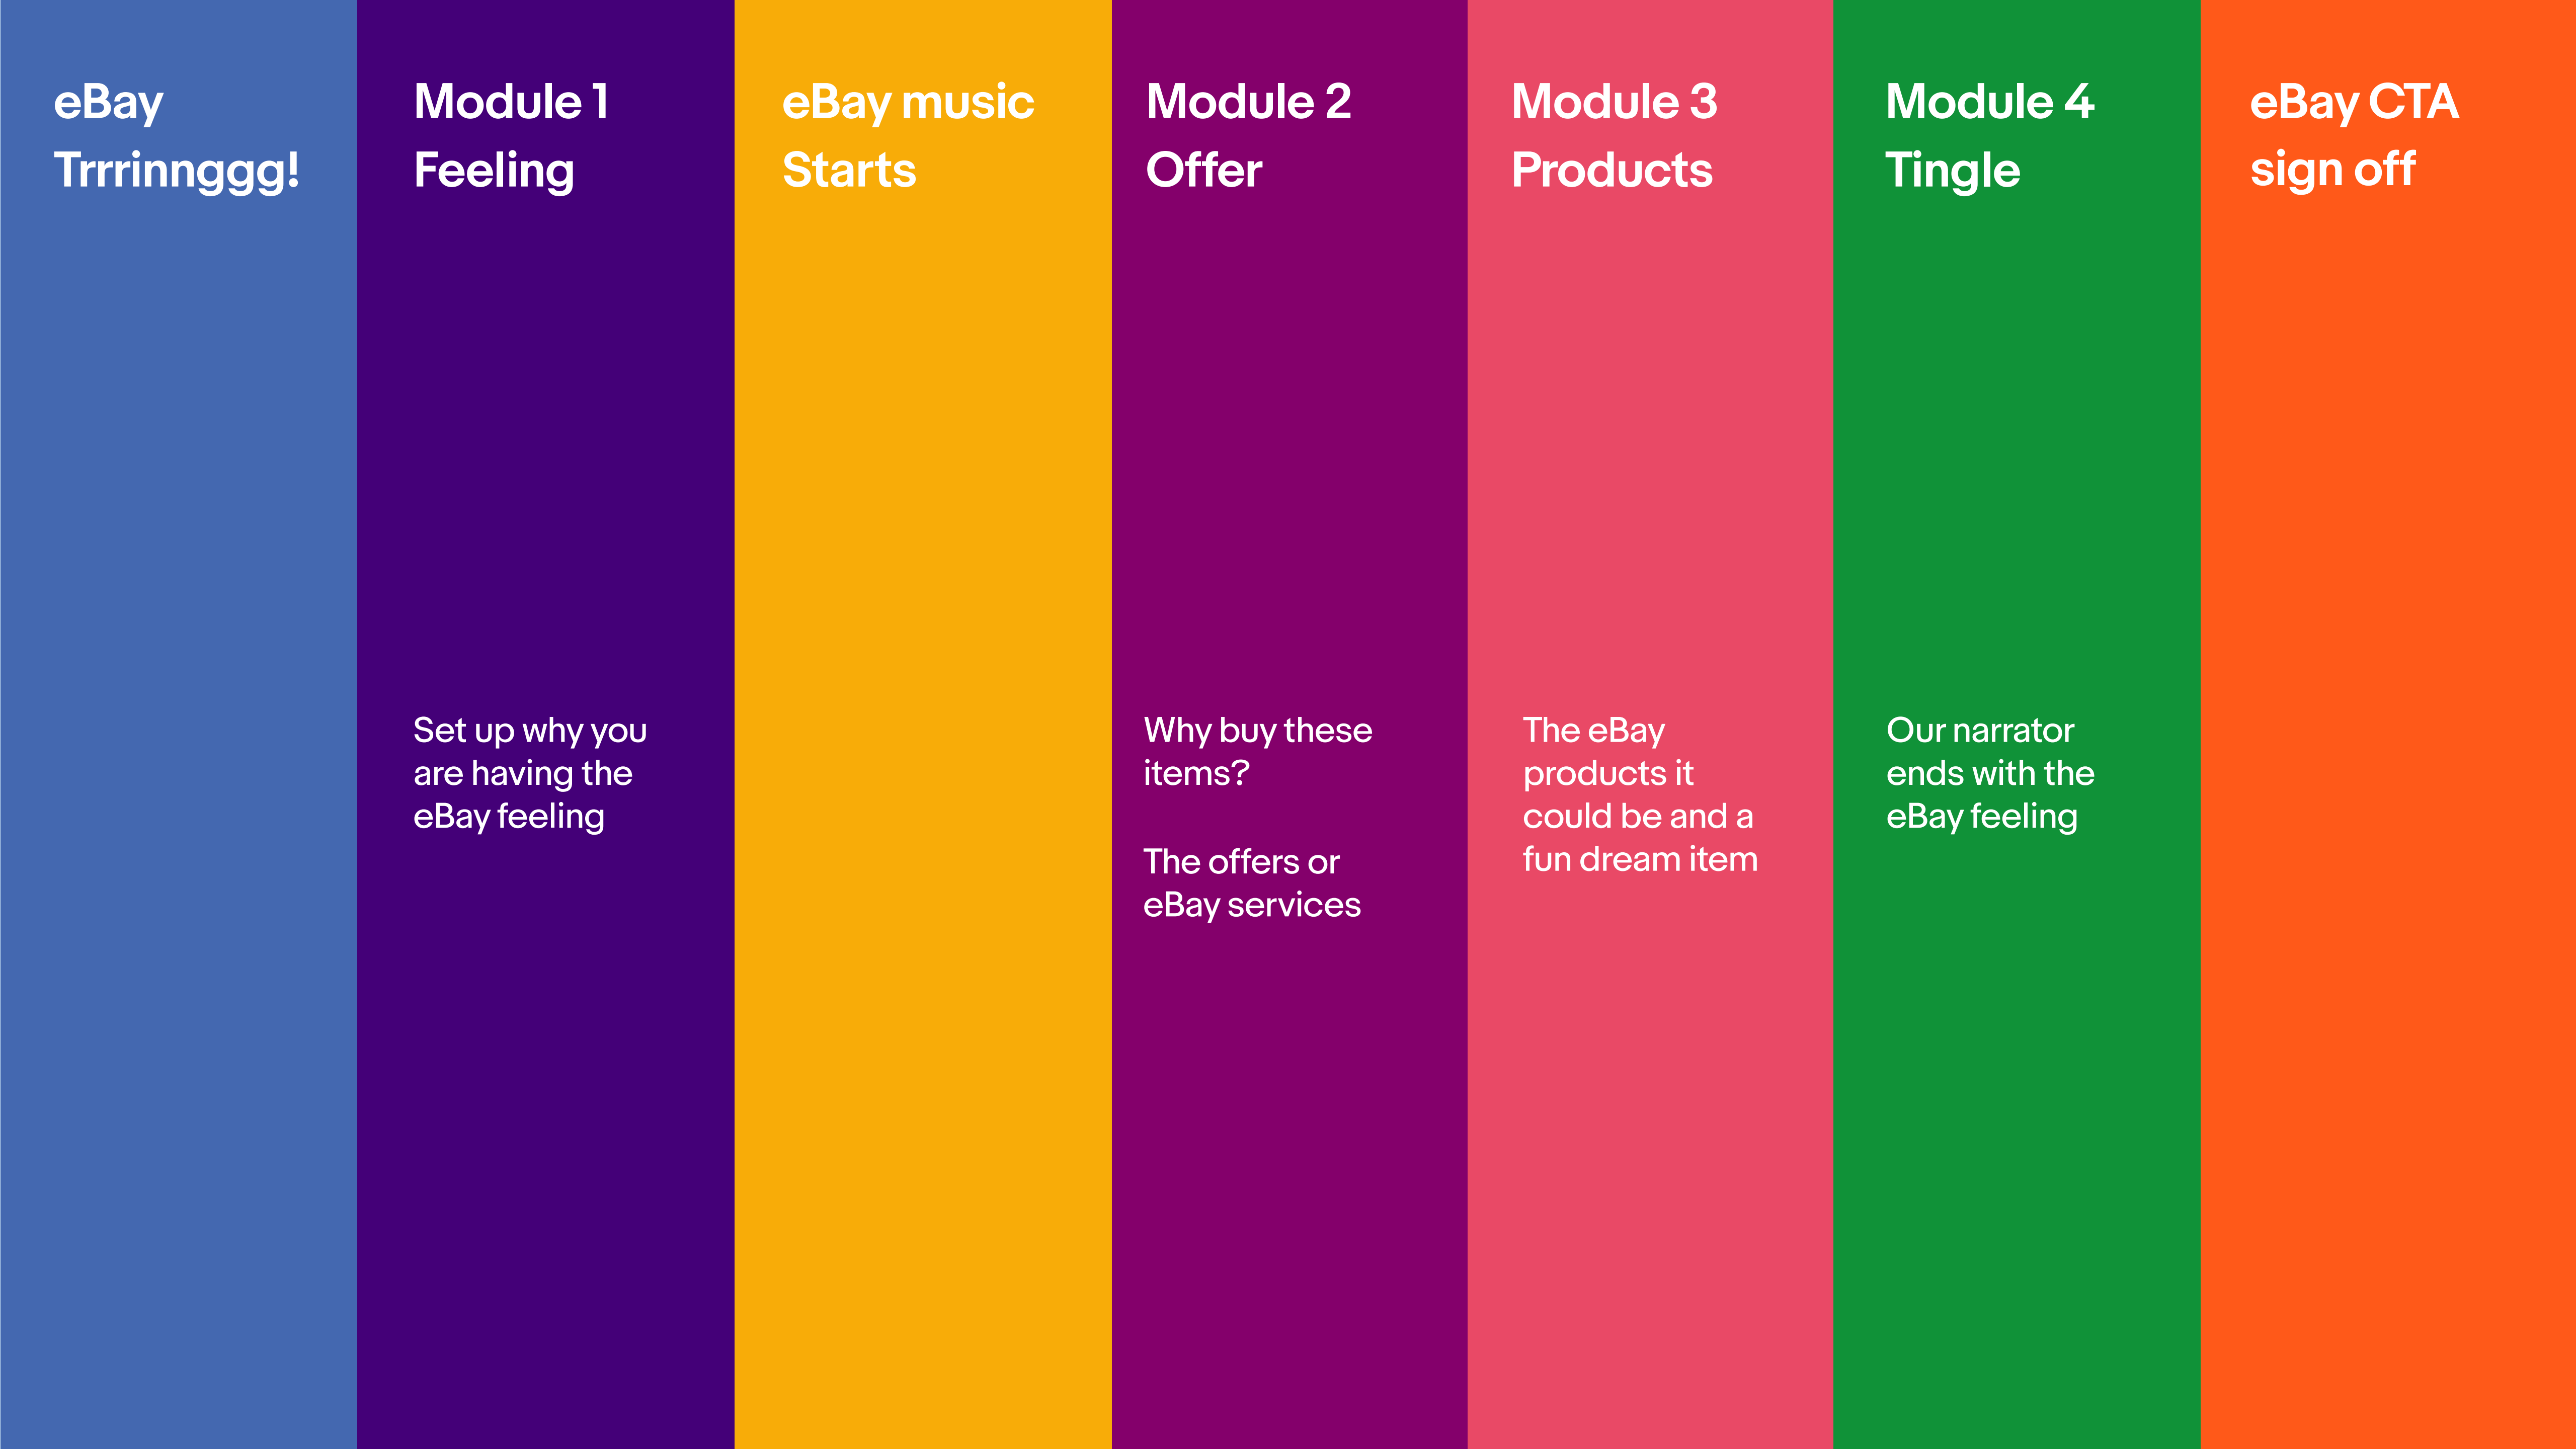

The eBay Trrrinnnggg! mnemonic alert sound has a such a strong positive affect on our users, let's make it the star of our audio comms.

The little 'tingle' of excitement that our users describe when the alert goes off on their phone, is a hugely powerful asset.

If we celebrate the unique and positive 'eBay feeling' that you can only get by using our brand, then we will attract new users and stimulate use from our current audience.

In each ad, we open on the Trrrinnnggg! mnemonic. Followed by our narrator eulogising the 'eBay tingle' of using our product. Then, as the eBay music kicks in, the narrator explains how the product offering in this spot is a great way to give listeners the 'eBay tingle'. Followed by our brand line of 'Fill Your Cart With Colour'.

Sequential

Once we've engaged with our audience, we can serve them with follow-up content, to create a longer, personalised conversation that prompts a stronger call to action.

Our radio system is designed to accommodate follow-up messaging to keep the conversation going and push the listener harder towards action. (With bags of charm, of course.)

How our concepts utilise Dynamic and Sequential messaging

System 1 Dynamic – Pre-pay day pinch

VO: Ever feel like you are sitting on a gold mine without a shovel?

SFX: eBay trinnnnng!

(eBay music starts)

VO: Think about it. All those vinyl albums you haven't played since you went digital could make a big noise on eBay.

And you wouldn't have to wait until payday to book those gig tickets.

With only a £1 selling fee on eBay, what's stopping you?

eBay.

Fill your cart with colour.

Bad weather – Consider this while it pours with rain

It's sunny – Consider this on a sunny day

Day and weather – Consider this on a wet Wednesday...

It's the weekend – Consider this on a Saturday morning ...

It's Tuesday 5.45pm – Consider this on your evening commute...

Geographic – Consider this while you're in Leeds...

Personalized – Think about it, Dave...

System 1 – Sequential

VO: Have you listed those vinyl albums on eBay yet?

SFX: eBay trinnnnng!

(eBay music starts)

VO: Instead of gathering dust, they could be gathering
you loads of cash on eBay.

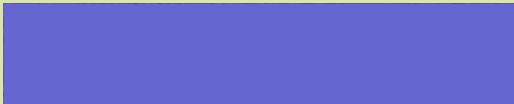

And there's only a £1 selling fee, so you won't be singing the payday blues.

eBay.

Fill your cart with colour.

System 2 Dynamic – Christmas

SFX: eBay trinnnnng!

VO:  How can you fill your Christmas eBay cart with colour?

(SFX: a big rich ‘chomp chomp chomp’ sound)

VO: Is it the sharpest set of chef’s knives? A marauding Star Wars Heavy Assault Walker? Or Rudolph chomping a carrot?

(eBay music starts)

With a bigger selection than the high street, you can find almost anything on eBay. Except reindeers.

Personalized – Hey Claire, it may be...

System 3 – Sequential

SSFX: Trrrrrrrinnnnngggggg!

VO: Ohhhh, have you got the EBay tingle of de-cluttering your wardrobe, yet?

SFX: EBay music starts and continues, throughout.

VO: It might not be rollerskates in there but there's bound to be something that is no longer you, that someone else can fall in love with - and give you some lovely cash for it in the process.

How about that for giving you the tingle?

SFX: Trrrrrrrinnnnngggggg!

Our narrator gets the tingle as he concludes.

VO: Ahhh, EBay. Fill your cart with colour.

3D Sound

Our eBay sonic mnemonic is perfect for 3D sound use.

We would not mix all the elements from the spot in 3D (music and voice).

But a 3D mix of our eBay mnemonic would really ‘pop’ out at listeners and really help to amplify the positive reaction users experience when hearing the device.

In addition, in the system where we employ other sound effects, we would consider 3D mixing these elements as well, to really help grab attention and aid engagement to the narrative.
